The need for quality nutrition

Weight-loss surgery can have remarkable results in terms of your overall health. Healthy habits are part of maintaining this good health—and nutrition is one of those habits.

Along with changes in how you eat, your doctor is likely to ask you to take some form of vitamin and mineral supplements for life. This is because weight-loss surgery causes you to eat less (so you take in less nutrition) and, in most procedures, to absorb less nutrition from the food you eat. Because of these changes, adding additional nutrients in the form of dietary supplements helps ensure you meet your nutritional needs.
